Excerpt: . . . not, or ought not to have, a Right to displace the Lecturer as Dr. Harris did. But the two Dr. As. A. s were of another Sentiment: With Them the Rights of the Parochial Ministers were sacred; and This, among Others, was One of them. So that in Their Judgment a Lecturer of the Parish-Church, chosen by the Parish, approved of and admitted by the Minister, licensed by the Bishop, and having been many Years in Possession, might be turned out by a New Minister, at his arbitrary Will and Pleasure, and That¹ too, though he had for a considerable time continued Lecturer even under the new Minister, and so might be presumed to have his tacit Consent. But This was some time ago; and the Circumstances of Persons and Things may be since altered. Now, in the Judgment of the felf-same Persons, both Father...
